297 U.S.

VAN DER WEYDE v. OCEAN TRANSPORT CO.,
LTD. ET AL.CERTIORARI TO THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT.

No. 4. Submitted January 15, 1936.—Decided February 3, 1936.

1. Jurisdiction if otherwise existing in the District Court over a libel of a Norwegian vessel by a seaman for personal injuries sustained on board in 1922, was not affected by Article XIII of the Treaty of 1827 with Sweden and Norway, providing a consular jurisdiction for adjudication of differences between captains and crews, in as much as that Article was terminated in 1919, by this Government, acting through the President and the Secretary of State. P. 116.
 2. Under § 16 of the Seamen's Act of March 4, 1915, by which Congress expressed its judgment that treaty provisions in conflict with the Act should be terminated and requested and directed the President to give notice to that effect to Governments concerned, it was the duty of the President to reach his conclusions as to such conflicts; and his finding of inconsistency between Article XIII of the Treaty of 1827, supra, and provisions of the statute, was neither arbitrary nor inadmissible. P. 117.
 3. Norway having agreed to the termination of Article XIII of the Treaty, her consul cannot be heard to question it. P. 118.
 4. The Treaty of Friendship, Commerce and Consular Rights, of June 5, 1928, between Norway and the United States, which supplanted most of the Treaty of 1827, including Article XIII cannot be regarded as affecting retroactively the jurisdiction of the District Court. P. 118.

CERTIORARI, 296 U. S. 567, to review a decree affirming the dismissal of a libel in admiralty for want of jurisdiction. Reported below sub nom. The Taigen Maru.

Messrs. John P. Hannon, Wm. P. Lord, and Andrew G. Haley submitted for petitioner.

Messrs. Lane Summers, F. T. Merritt, and W. H. Hayden submitted for respondent.

MR. CHIEF JUSTICE HUGHES delivered the opinion of the Court.

Petitioner brought this libel in 1931, in the District Court for the Western District of Washington, against the vessel "Taigen Maru," for personal injuries which he sustained as a seaman in 1922. The vessel was then known as the "Luise Nielsen" and was of Norwegian registry. The respondent, Ocean Transport Company, Ltd., a Japanese corporation, made claim as owner, and filed exceptions alleging that a final decree had been entered in the District Court for the District of Oregon in 1924, dismissing a libel, for the same cause, on the intervention of the Norwegian consul.

In the present case, there was again an intervention by the Norwegian consul, who claimed that, while the vessel was now Japanese, he was nevertheless officially concerned, as the former Norwegian owner had agreed to deliver the vessel "free from all debts and encumbrances." The consul filed exceptive allegations to the effect that the libelant, a Dutch subject, had signed Norwegian articles and, so far as his rights as a seaman were concerned, was bound by the laws of Norway, which provided for appropriate remedies. The consul asked that, if the cause was not dismissed because of the former decree, the dispute should be left for his adjustment and disposition. The libelant made response and, on hearing, the District Court dismissed the cause "in the exercise of its discretion."

The Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the decree, but upon the ground that the dismissal should have been for want of jurisdiction rather than as an exercise of discretion. 73 F. (2d) 922. The court based its decision upon the second paragraph of Article XIII of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation, of 1827, between the United States and the Kingdom of Sweden and Norway, the text of which is given in the margin.¹ The court assumed that this provision was still in effect, apparently not being advised of the fact that Articles XIII and XIV of that treaty had been terminated in 1919. See Foreign Relations of the United States, 1919, pp. 47-54.

Section 16 of the Seamen's Act of March 4, 1915,² expressed "the judgment of Congress" that treaty provisions in conflict with the provisions of the Act "ought to be terminated," and the President was "requested and directed" to give notice to that effect to the several Governments concerned within ninety days after the passage of the Act. It appears that, in consequence, notice was given and that a large number of treaties were terminated in whole or in part.³ The Treaty with Sweden and Norway of 1827 provided that it might be terminated, after an initial period of ten years, upon one year's notice.⁴ On February 2, 1918, the Government gave notice to the Norwegian Government of the denunciation of the treaty in its entirety, to take effect on February 2, 1919, but later by an exchange of diplomatic notes, this Government formally withdrew its denunciation, except as to Articles XIII and XIV. Foreign Relations of the United States, 1919, pp. 50-52. It was expressly stated that Articles XIII and XIV of the treaty, being in conflict with provisions of the Seamen's Act, were deemed to be terminated on July 1, 1916, so far as the laws of the United States were concerned. Id. pp. 53, 54.

On June 5, 1928, the two Governments signed a Treaty of Friendship, Commerce, and Consular Rights, and on February 25, 1929, an additional Article, which supplanted the Treaty of 1827 (so far as the latter had remained effective), save that Article I of the former treaty concerning the entry and residence of the nationals of the one country in the territories of the other for the purposes of trade, was continued in force.⁵

Respondent contends (1) that the Seamen's Act did not specifically direct the abrogation of Article XIII, (2) that the Act was not so unavoidably inconsistent with all the provisions of Article XIII as to require its entire abrogation, and (3) that the diplomatic negotiations attempting to effect abrogation of the whole of Article XIII "were in excess of congressional direction and in violation of constitutional authority."

The first and second points are unavailing, if Article XIII was actually abrogated in its entirety, and that this was the purport of the diplomatic exchanges between the two Governments is beyond dispute. As to the third point, we think that the question as to the authority of the Executive in the absence of congressional action, or of action by the treaty-making power, to denounce a treaty of the United States, is not here involved. In this instance, the Congress requested and directed the President to give notice of the termination of the treaty provisions in conflict with the Act. From every point of view, it was incumbent upon the President, charged with the conduct of negotiations with foreign governments and also with the duty to take care that the laws of the United States are faithfully executed, to reach a conclusion as to the inconsistency between the provisions of the treaty and the provisions of the new law. It is not possible to say that his conclusion as to Articles XIII and XIV was arbitrary or inadmissible. Having determined that their termination was necessary, the President through the Secretary of State took appropriate steps to effect it. Norway agreed to the termination of Articles XIII and XIV and her consul cannot be heard to question it.

The injuries, of which libelant complains, took place after that termination. The effect of the new treaty we need not, and do not, consider, as in any event it could not be regarded as retroactively affecting the jurisdiction of the District Court.

The Circuit Court of Appeals fell into error in sustaining the dismissal of the cause upon the ground of want of jurisdiction by reason of the treaty provision invoked. We express no opinion upon any other questions which the cause may present, as these have not been considered by the courts below. They should be considered and determined.

The decree is reversed and the cause is remanded for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.
